FFF BAYERN

Bavaria, and particularly its capital, Munich, is one of Germany's leading film hubs and offers one stop shop solutions for national as well as international film and television productions. With an annual budget of approximately € 37 million, FFF Bayern – one of the most important regional film funding institutions in Germany – provides funding for story and project development, production of feature and television films and series, for international co-productions, web series, games and extended reality formats, for distribution and sales as well as for cinemas. In order to get access to the FFF Bayern – or any other national funding program – international productions require a German co-producer.

FILM COMMISSION BAYERN

The Film Commission Bayern is the first information and contact point for national and international production companies before and while filming in Bavaria. The Commission acts as an interface and moderator for the production industry and the responsible authorities and supports and connects producers, line producers and production managers with useful contacts to location scouts, studios, labs, rentals and service providers.

With the aim to open up all regions of Bavaria for filming, the Film Commission teamed up with the Bavaria Tourism Marketing Agency to provide a free, extensive location database and organizes scouting tours for international productions. The city of Munich with its own Film Office also contributes to the desirability of Bavaria as a filming location.

The Film Commission Bayern is member of the AFCI (Association of Film Commissions International), EUFCN (European Film Commissions Network) and founding partner of the network GERMAN FILM COMMISSIONS.
